Once upon a time, according to Harry Emerson Fosdick, who is cred little son walked across the fields on a summer afternoon, to a little church where the minister, a visitor, was to preach. At the door was a box for offerings, in which the visiting minister, as he arrived, placed 50 cents. The regular minister and the congregation arrived shortly after, and the service proceeded. After it, the minister of the church said to his visitor: "Now, I Robert L. Bailey, as admr of want you to have whatever offerings there are in the box. I don't know how much there may be." Three Black Birds.

Many people are unable to tell the difference between a rook, a crow and a tackdaw. The rook when a year old has a bare face, and its plumage is shiny black; the hooded crow is ashen gray, with a black head; while the carrion, though the same size as the rook has a steel-blue shimmer on its plum age, and its wings are by no means as long as those of the rook. The lack daw can be distinguished easily from any of the other three, first because it inches long-and, secondly, because it has purplish plumage and a gray neck.

Hypnotism as Aid to Surgery. Hypnotism as an aid to surgery was made use of many years ago to a limited degree, but recently is seems to have come into favor and in connection with a narcotic-hypno-narcosis it is called. Light hypnosis induced before an operation will establish the patient's equanimity and prevent the natural anxiety associated with the operation and with the taking of an anaesthetic. The principal induction takes place just before the operation, the patient then being slowly anaesthetized so that the parcetic state supervenes men the hypnotic, Narcosis ceases as soon as the operation is completed, and hypnosis is again brought into use. The benefits are immediate. The amount of parcotic used is reduced by one-third or two-fifths of what would otherwise be required Any toxic action is, therefore, of the alightest, after-effects being corres patient awakes from a sleep rather than from

TO WHOM IT MAY CONCERN

It has been circulated among the tobacco haulers of this town that there was some kind of contagious disease among the horses and mules and that there had been some 8 or 10 died in the Mt. Sterling stockyards. I have not been able to find out where this started from, I want to say that there hasn't been a horse or mule died in the stockyards in the past two years nor has there been any contagious disease. This place is disinfected every month. Willie Stone lost two or three mules. Dr. Horton says two of them died from indigestion and one from a kick. A. B. Wells has had something over 300 mules here in the past three months and lost one from double pneumonia. All of this stock died in the warehouse across the street from the stockyards.

This is to certify that I have done all of the veterinary practice at the Mt. Sterling stockyards for the past three years and there has not been a case of contagious or infectious disease at said yards.
